Licèt non optimè de me ſis meritus, benè tamen tibi dixi, honorificè de te ſum locutus, mea fuit de te honorifica Oratio; verbum ex ore meo nullum exiit, niſi tua cum laude conjunctum; laudes in te contuli, licèt immerentem; licèt immerito tuo, laudavi te, extuli, ornavi, afficci laudibus, præclara quædam in te contuli, dixi de te, quæ tibi laudem parerent; Iis de te verbis uſus ſum, quæ ad te honeſtandum valerent, vim haberent. To praiſe, or commend; Laudare. Omnes te ſummis laudibus extollunt, efferunt, exornant, in cœlum ferunt, ſemper aliquid ex te promis, quod alios delectet, teipſum laudibus illuſtret: Satisfacere immortalitati laudum tuarum mirabiliter cupit: Cato res Ciceronis ornavit, divinis laudibus extulit, proſecutus eſt: Brutus effertur laudibus, in cœlum tollitur, quia contendit ut in priſtinam libertatem patriam vindicaret, reſtitueret. To get immortal praiſe; Laudem, gloriam immortalem, ſempiternam, quæ vix cœlo capi poſſe videtur, aſſequi, conſequi. Nomen ſibi comparare, quod nulla vetuſtas obruet, nulla unquam obſcurabit oblivio, poſteritas alet, ipſa æternitas intuebitur, de quo nulla unquam ætas conticeſcet; quod poſteritatis memoria tenacius apprehendet. Vir cujus vita multis præclaríſque monumentis ad omnem memoriam eſt commendata, conſecrata; cujus gloriæ veſtigia non ſunt preſſa leviter ad exigui temporis prædicationem, ſed altiùs fixa ad memoriam ejus ſempiternam. Omnium ſeculorum memoriâ vivere, vigere. Laude nullis ſeculis interiturâ celebrari. Nulla dies unquam memori vos æſtimet ævo. In freta dum fluvii currunt, &c. Virg. Æneid. 11. Semper honos nomenque tuum laudeſque manebunt. Mors in te poterit juris habere nihil. Nomen ab æternâ; A ſerâ nomen poſteritate feres. Illum aget pennâ metuente ſolvi Fama ſuperſtes. Pigra fugies ingrata flumina Lethes: Et meliore tui parte ſuperſtes eris.——— Memorem famam, qui benè geſſit, habet. Cujus facta Æternis famæ monumentis inſita florent. —— Æternúmque tenet per ſecula nomen. Non omnis moriar, multaque pars mei vitabit Libitinam. Non obibo, nec Stygiâ cohibebor undâ. He hath gotten him a great praiſe, or commendation; Laudem ſummam conſecutus eſt. Summam ex eo munere laudem, eximiam, egregiam, miram, mirificam, inſignem, immenſam, ſingularem, unicam, incredibilem, excellentem, præſtantiſſimam, ampliſſimam, æternam, ſempiternam, immortalem, non mediocrem, non minimam, non vulgarem consequutus est, adeptus est, obtinuit, tulit, quæsivit, sibi peperit, comparavit: jecit fundamenta dignitatis meæ; ingressus sum in laudem. Nunc tuæ summæ laudes excelso, & illustri loco sitæ sunt. Desirous of praise, or hunting after praise; Laudis studiosus. Omnes tuos ad laudes impetus novi; quàm sis ad laudem propensus, inclinatus, quanti sit apud te laus, quàm labores de laude, quàm vehementer ad laudem incumbas, quàm laudi studeas, quo studio laudem sequaris, quæ tua sit laudis cupiditas, præclarè novi, habeo cognitum. To carry favour by praising of men, or to commend others, thereby to get himself more favour of them; Laus gratiæ causâ. Tantas in me laudes confers, effers me laudibus non judicio tuo, meritóve adductus meo, sed ut ineas à me gratiam, gratiæ causâ, ad colligendam benevolentiam; gratiam meam his laudibus aucuparis: das auribus hoc meis; largiris mihi, non veritati; auribus inservis, loqueris ad voluntatem; Non hoc animo tacis, sed eo consilio id spectas, id secutus, meum tibi ut amorem hoc artificio, hoc tuo quasi merito adjungas, ut mihi gratificeris. To be praised of dishonest men, is nothing worth; Nihil est laus ab illaudatis profecta. Ea de laude minimum laboro, eam laudem minimi puto, reputo, facio, duco, æstimo, pendo, flocci facio, contemno, respuo, aspernor, nullam puto, in minimis pono, in postremis habeo, ab ea laude non pendeo, ea me laus minimum movet, parùm afficit, non tangit, non capit, non ducit; Eam laudem non specto, non amo, non curo, non expetendam duco, inter optabilia non refero; (& hæc omnia passivis licet iisdem verbis convertere;) quæ proficiscitur ab iis, qui ipsi in laude non vivunt, qui laudem ipsi nullam consequuti sunt, qui ab omni laude procul absunt, quibus ipsis laus nulla tribuitur. Thou art unworthy of praise; Indignus es laude. Indignum te laude præbuisti, ostendisti; Non eum te præbuisti, præstitisti, ostendisti, probasti, non ita gessisti, non ea tuæ vitæ ratio fuit, non ejusmodi sunt merita tua, non te talem vidimus, cognovimus, sensimus, experti sumus, non is nobis cognitus es, ut asficiendus, ornandus, decorandus, honestandus, efferendus, extoliendus laude sis; ut laus in te non conveniat, tibi debeatur; Ut laudis præmium quasi tibi debitum non possis exigere; ut laus, quasi tuis meritis debita merces, persolvenda tibi non esse, tribuenda, deferenda videatur. A man worthy of all praise; Vir omni laude, prædicatione, præconio, omnium seculorum memoriâ dignus, dignissimus. Nihil dici potest quod sit ejus meritis par, quod non sit minus futurum, infra, infra laudem, infra meritum. Omni laude major, nunquam satis laudatus. Supra omnem adulationem laudis, & præconiorum assentationem. Vir admirabilis, maximè rarus & penè singularis, summus, divinus, præstantissimus, ornatissimus, ad omnia summa natus, in quo summa sunt omnia; quem literæ nullæ satis dignis laudibus prædicare possunt, nedum amplificare. Vir eo usque laudibus in Cœlum attollendus, quousque virtus eniti potest, meritorúmque præstantia efferri. Omnium gentium, sæculorum omnium, omnis memoriæ facilè princeps. Homo est paucorum hominum; haud similis nostrorum hominum. Maxime, qui tanti mensuram nominis imples, Et geminas animi nobilitate genus, O decus atque ævi gloria sola tui.—— Ad unguem factus homo. Simili sensu dicitur panis lapidosus, (sic enim Fabius Verrucosus appellabat beneficium ab homine duro asperè datum,) quem esurienti necessarium sit accipere, durus & acerbus appellatur, apud Sen. lib. de benef. 11. Ita quidam contatione, torvitate vultûs, asperitate orationis, ostentatione, corrumpunt beneficium, ut nemo sit accepturus, qui possit eo carere. Ita etiam apud Homerum, Ἀπώλεσας τὸν ἔμον οἶνον ὕδατι μίξας ὕδωρ, i. e. perdidisti vinum meum infusâ aquâ; verba sunt Polyphemi: Sic enim increpat Ulyssem vinum aquâ temperantem. Antiquitùs enim merum bibebant non sine noxa, donec Staphilus Sirrhi filius ostendisset, vinum aquâ diluere. To Rot; Putrere, putrescere, marcere, marcescere. A rot, or murrain; Lues, f. Rotten; Putridus, putris, fracidus, tabidus. Rotten, as wood; Cariosus. To make rotten; Putrefacere. To be rotten; Putrefieri. Made rotten; Putrefactus. That maketh rotten; Septicus, tabificus. Rotteness; Putredo, f. marcor, m. tabes. Rottenness in wood; Caries. To rot, rust, or putrifie; Putrescere, computrescere. hibent ne se totum, penitus literis, studiis addicat; impediunt quo minus immensos studiorum labores exantlare, sustinere, perferre possit. Infirmior, imbecillior est, tenuiore valetudine, corpore languidiore, debilioribus viribus, valetudinis infirmioris, infirmiore valetudine; minus habet virium, quàm ut studiorum grave onus ferendo sit, laboribus immensis par esse possit. Adeo virium vitio laborat, imbecillâ utitur valetudine; tantâ est corporis imbecillitate, ut in studia incumbentem laborum ipsa moles facile possit opprimere. Eâ valetudine non fruitur; eam corporis firmitatem natura non dedit: eas negavit ei vires quas, quam literarum laboriosa tractatio, assidua commentatio, gravissima studia postulant, requirunt, exigunt, desiderant. Corporis, virium, valetudinis infirmitas, debilitas, tenuitas, imbecillitas facit, ut studiis ei vel abstinendum sit, vel immorieudum necessariò. Non mihi respondent veteres in carmina vires. ——Dolor artibus obstat. Speciales quædam observationes Phraseologicæ; Certain singular Phraseological observations.

1. When a Passive English is to be made by a Latine Neuter, then the Present tense English is to be made by the Preterperfect tense Latine: and the English Preterimperfect by the Latine Preterpluperfect, or Preterperfect tense at least: as, Being we are set upon the soft grass; Quandoquidem in molli consedimus herba; Virg. After we were set; Cùm consedissemus; Varr. Nox abiit, nec tamen orta dies; Ovid. Vix agmen extra munitiones processerat cùm Galli flumen transire non dubitabant; Cæs. 2. When an English Passive is to be made by a Latine Deponent, then vary the English Passive by an English Active, and so translate it: as, Many things are said by many men, i. e. Many men say many things; Multi multa loquuntur; Caro. So, He is followed by many, i. e. Many follow him; Multi illum sequuntur. 3. When the sign of a Casual word is far off from it, or from the verb that governs it, then cast the words into the natural order, and so translate them: as, Him I dare be told to disclose all my secrets to, i. e. I dare be bold to disclose all my secrets to him; Apud eum expromere omnia mea occulta audeo; Teren. And if any thing be wanting to complete the sense, supply it: as, Who wrote this? I: i. e. I did, or I did write it; Quis hoc scripsit? Ego scripsi, or Ego feci. Note. It is not necessary always to repeat the Verb, that hath already been expressed, which sometimes may be better omitted; yet it may be repeated upon occasion: as, Videndum est primùm utrum ea velint, an non velint; Plaut. At etiam dubitavi vos homines emerem, an non emerem, diu; Plaut. And sometimes the Verb facio for it: as, Quid est suavius, quàm bene rem gerere bono publico? sicut ego feci heri; Plaut. Vale, & me, ut facis, ama; Cass. Ciceroni. Multas à te accepi epistolas, eodem die, omnes diligenter scriptas. Ea verò quæ instar voluminis erat, sæpe legenda, sicuti facio; Cic. 4. When an English Phrase cannot be translated word for word, but into bald Latine, then vary the Phrase into other words, expressing the full sense of it, and so translate it; as, He was in hand with the old man, i. e. He dealt with the old man; Egit cum sene; not, Erat in manu cum sene. Let us take our heels, i. e. let us betake our selves to our feet, or run away; Nos in pedes conjiciamus, or fugiamus; not, Capiamus calces nostros. I am scarce of money, i. e. Money fails me; Deficit me pecunia; not, Sum vix pecuniæ. It puts me in great hope, i. e. It brings great hope to me, or It brings me unto great hope; Spem mihi summam affert, or Me in summam exspectationem adducit; not, Ponit me in magna spe. Submonition. And yet here great gentleness is to be used in the case of mistakes: because many times the English and Latine Phrases do so, as I may say, jump together, that the verbal rendring of the one will be no inelegancy in the other: as, In very deed; In re ipsa; Ter. In short; In brevi; Quintil. I am content with it; Contentus isto sum; Cic. I know not what in the world I have; Nescio quid vero habeo in mundo; Plaut. I pray you have me excused; Excusatum habeas me rogo; Martial. To be left in suspense; In suspenso relinqui qui; Plin. I put all my hope in you; In te omnem ſpem pono; Cic. But when I had done all; Sed cùm omnia feciſſem; Cic. I was in great hope that——Eram in ſpe magna, fore ut ——Cic. He is not in fault; Is in culpa non eſt; Teren. In conſideration of which, and more that I could produce, is is not ſo eaſie to ſay what is not Latine, as what is. So that in all either ſuppoſed or real miſtakes of this nature, moderation would be uſed, more good being like to be done by gently ſhewing how to do better, than by ſeverity of uſage for not having done ſo well. (Vocabula à quibus puritatis Romanæ ſtudioſis ſit abſtinendum:) Sordida, Priſca, Nova, antiquata Poetica, Dura, Turpia, Rara nimis, vel Peregrina, fuge.
